Support journalists on strike at Yorkshire Post

Editorial staff at the Yorkshire Post and Yorkshire Evening Post are starting the first of two four-day strikes this Thursday over management's determination to press ahead with three compulsory redundancies. The action follows a ballot that showed an overwhelming vote for strike action. The union believes that, unless it makes a stand on this issue, management will press ahead with many more job cuts, and force up productivity among remaining staff – a state of affairs that is being replicated at media companies around the country.
